From a castle in the countryside to a chic property in Chelsea, these are some of Europe's newest hotels worth making a trip for.

We're now well into the new year, and most of us are already looking to plan our next holiday. There are some incredible new hotels to check out locally from a Brisbane boutique filled with quirky portraits to Australia's first co-working space-slash-hotel, but there's also a slew of new openings in Europe to take note of.

So if you're looking to travel a bit further, we've rounded up some of our favourites. Read on to see our pick of the best new hotels in Europe.

The Barcelona EDITION, Barcelona

The best way to describe The Barcelona EDITION is as an urban resort. An intimate space with low-ceiling and sheepskin-carpeted lounges, the hotel sits in the Spanish city's bustling creative hub in the centre of the famed historic Ciutat Vella district.

Its Punch Room communal area with dark oak checkerboard floor and a fireplace, its basement floor-level restaurant Cabaret, and its hip rooftop drinking hole The Roof make a stay here much more than just a hotel overnight.
