PUNCHES

Punch has some pretty shady origins. From its birth on the sun-bleached decks of 17th century trade ships, it found its way into the cutthroat seafarers' taverns of port cities and from there to the tables and garden parties of the aristocracy. You could say that Punch was the first truly modern drink, making use of exciting new ingredients discovered on the trade routes; the five traditional ingredients of punch: spirits from Europe and the colonies, spices and citrus from Africa and the east, teas from China and India, sugar from the Indies.

It's a drink of pirates, of traders, of slaves and press-ganged sailors, a drink of kings, noblemen, soldiers and whores. It's a deep and complex story of trade, co-operation and optimism for the new world but with undeniable base notes of thievery, exploitation and death. In essence, the story of punch is the story of the modern world.

Punch makes sense here in Barcelona. In this modern, international port city. We invite you to come with us on this little journey into our past and hopefully our future too: punch is a social drink, a celebration of communality; a collection of ingredients from across the globe brought together to create a symphonious whole, so we serve the punches individually or in bowls, to share.

SPANISH MILK PUNCH

On paper this is confusing, intriguing and a little bizarre, but nothing short of brilliant. The texture of this drink is silky smooth, the flavours crisp, well rounded and identifiable. Very more-ish.

COLD RUBY PUNCH

She might sound like the savage ex-girlfriend that broke it off with you using an emoji story but in fact, Cold Ruby is one of the most classic recipes for punch as we know it. An incredibly balanced expression of the drink and a great way to get acquainted with Arrack, not to mention the date you're on this evening. Adios, Ruby.

ENOTRIA PUNCH

Wine was a big thing to the Romans and Greeks. They pretty much drank it all day and were constantly poisoning one another with it, bathing in it or like the stoic philosopher Chrysippus, feeding it to their donkeys for laughs. They would mix it up with herbs and spices to make it more interesting. Our take on it is spiked with a lavender and thyme cordial and we added some Banks 5 because you don't have all day.

WEDDING PUNCH

This is an adaptation of a famous Jerry Thomas recipe. We have updated it by using sherbet and fresh ingredients and replacing claret with Champagne, because we are fancy like that. It includes essence of ambergris but we assure you NO whales were hurt in the making of this drink.

TEMPERANCE PUNCH

For our boring/annoyingly responsible friends. Because someone needs to be the designated driver and occasionally, ladies fall pregnant.

CLOSER TO GOD

There's a lot going on in this bevvy; you're probably wondering how in the hell such incongruous elements came together at all. But trust us, the journey through smoky mezcal to tart Martini Ambrato to soothing chamomile is one worth taking.

EDITION PUNCH

Our house punch, available all year round. Easy going and aromatic, with jasmine tea and a subtle hint of wood from the oak moss. Great things start here.

KUBLAI KHAN PUNCH

Obviously we've never been to an opium den. Well not recently anyway, but everything in the name of research. This punch is as if you went back 150 years to the opium dens of Southeast Asia. Evocative and fragrant notes from the tamarind, tonka, pandan and black tea, with the velvet embrace of Arrack and pale ale to send you drifting away...

CONFESSION OF LOVE PUNCH

If you haven't had punch before and want a good entry level recommendation, may we suggest this shameless crowd pleaser. It's equally fruity and decadent. Coincidentally, that description also describes the type of people we like to drink with.

PUNCH DE VERANO

We get very excited about ingredients and trying new things. Sometimes we get a bit carried away, hence some of the terrible tattoos around here. This punch is our excuse to make delicious drinks from the freshest and most seasonal products we can find/steal from other people's gardens.
