AROUND THE NEIGHBORHOOD

CARLOS CRUZ-DIEZ: CHROMOSATURATION

Currently on view | Pérez Art Museum Miami
Chromosaturation is an immersive installation that reimagines color as a lived, bodily experience. Conceived in 1965, the work comprises three interconnected chambers, each illuminated in a single hue: red, green, or blue. Immersed in this monochrome environment, the viewer experiences a kind of retinal overload, confronting the limits of visual perception. The work underscores color as an inherent property of light—a physical, temporal phenomenon that unfolds in real time as the viewer moves through the space.

JACK PIERSON: THE MIAMI YEARS

Currently on view | The Bass
Jack Pierson: The Miami Years is the first exhibition devoted to exploring the city’s transformative impact on Pierson’s life and work. The artist’s initial excursion from New York City to Miami Beach in the winter of 1984 instigated many return visits over the years. South Beach’s sun-soaked landscape and queer nightlife offered a spirited reprieve from the pressures of New York City, with the freedom of inexpensive apartments and thrift-store finds helping fuel the undercurrent of wanderlust and escapism brewing in Pierson’s art.
